Debby Tauer 1.0 out of 5 stars I am a retired accountant and normally have a high end calculator. My old calculator died and since I'm retired I didn't want to buy another hi-end calculator for doing minor calculations and decided I'd take a chance on this. It does the job adequately but is not something you would want for high end use. The keys aren't the best due to height and spacing and the printing is as slow as molasses in winter. For home use it's ok and should get the job done, for professional use not so much. Thankfully it is within the return time frame and I am sending it back. They last about a year with the daily use that I give them. I have not given this a five star rating because the plus key sticks and they have added 2 new keys in the spot where the paper feed used to be and now have to watch that I don't hit this key instead of the paper feed. I also like the old way to have paper print on or off. So, all in all, the calculator is fair, but I need it everyday so I can not ship back as the old one bit the dust before I put this in use. The next one I buy, will be more carefully looked at, for placement of keys. It's the right size, looks sleek and works well. It replaces a clunky black Office Depot desktop printing calculator that went bad after 10 years or so. I would definitely recommend this Canon as a desktop for business or personal use. Price on Amazon was best. Really makes it hard when you are adding a large row of numbers and you have to duplicate entries several times throughout the calculation. Just sent Canon support an email. We'll see if they respond.

They told me I could send it back and they would look at it but it doesn't do it all the time and I can't do without a calculator for 10 or more days which is what they told me it would take. Don't buy this junk and they won't help. If you have an office with several calculators or just want to be sure to ALWAYS find a ribbon, this will be an issue for you. Reluctantly, I am returning it for that one, but major flaw. It's an excellent product, and they had super fast shipping, but I returned for a smaller profile calculator.
